More than 110 Events Organized throughout the Country to Celebrate Catholic Sisters during National Catholic Sisters Week

The third annual National Catholic Sisters Week takes place March 8 – 14, 2016

ST. PAUL, Minn. March 1, 2016 – National Catholic Sisters Week (NCSW), the third annual celebration of women religious taking place March 8 – 14, 2016, announces a record number of events planned across the country to celebrate the remarkable contributions and devoted lives of Catholic sisters, in tandem with National Women’s History Month.

“There’s so much energy surrounding NCSW, due in part to the 40 mini-grant recipients and the 50 Ambassadors we engaged across the country, making this year’s celebrations of women religious incredibly exciting,” said Sister Mary Soher, co-executive director of NCSW headquartered at St. Catherine University in St. Paul, Minn.

NCSW was created in 2014 to recognize and celebrate the profound impact Catholic sisters have had historically and presently on the communities in which we live. For NCSW 2016, that mission was heightened by granting event-based scholarships and activating a network of Ambassadors across the country, culminating in the planning of more than 110 events in 22 states.

The mini-grant initiative, announced in November 2015, encouraged individuals or communities of sisters to apply to receive up to $1,000 in grants to fund local activities that would celebrate Catholic sisters during NCSW 2016. Grants are funding a range of activities, including a Little Free Library dedicated to the Sisters of St. Joseph in Orange, Calif., and a Quincenera After-Party hosted by San Antonio sisters.

Additionally, a network of more than 50 Ambassadors was activated to focus event-planning efforts in five key religious communities: Boston, Chicago, New Orleans, Houston and Los Angeles. The ambassadors orchestrated unique, hyper-local events in their cities to create more opportunities to bring a focus – and celebration – to the work of Catholic sisters. Initiatives planned by NCSW Ambassadors include Cookies with a Sister at Xavier University and Loyola University in New Orleans, radio interviews with Sisters in the Houston market, and a video series highlighting the ministry of sisters being produced by Presence Health in Chicago.

“The outpouring of creative ideas from individuals across the United States has resulted in what will be the best NCSW yet,” said Molly Hazelton, co-executive director of NCSW. “It is thrilling to see the national community join as one to celebrate and honor women religious.”

“Take a sister to get a cup of coffee, ask her a question about her life, her vocation” suggested Sister Mary. “Events large and small are welcomed for NCSW. It’s never too late to celebrate sisters.”
